+20% = 1.20x normal damage. +10% = 1.10x. +0% = 1.00x: the normal hit still deals damage.

Numbers are AI-guided balancing targets. Temporary effects depend on the actual target; live combat consistency is not yet verified.

Impact

One debuff per target. A new reaction debuff replaces the previous one; it never stacks indefinitely.

Penalties end after the next applicable resolution or at the end of the following party turn. Anatomy, equipment and immunities still matter.

Set it up. Follow through. Resonate.

The setup and finisher can come from different characters. Enemies can use the same elemental combinations.

1 Land an elemental hit

A real eligible hit leaves one imprint on its exact target. Misses, full immunity and decorative effects leave none.

2 Add a compatible hit

Use a separate action on that same target during this turn or the next. Either elemental order works.

3 Resolve the reaction

Consume the imprint, apply the listed payoff and earn +1 Resonance for the player who finishes it. Maximum one point per finisher per turn.

THE SHORT WINDOW

Turn N: setup hit → Same turn or N+1: compatible finisher → Otherwise: imprint expires

20 points unlock a ready surge

19 earned points + one completed reaction = 20 / 20. The filling reaction does not boost itself.

RESONANT → Next landed technique

+50% ordinary damage

Keeps the surge ready

A miss, healing or utility action. Charge also carries between battles; rest and leveling do not earn it.

Spends the old charge

A landed damaging spell or trained technique begun already ready. A reaction on that burst starts the next cycle at one.

Remember: one imprint and one reaction debuff per target. At most one reaction per target per turn. A newer debuff replaces the old one. Physical slashing, piercing, bludgeoning and Soul do not prime or consume imprints.

Damage example before mitigation: a 100-damage hit becomes 120 at +20%, 110 at +10%, or stays 100 at +0%.

Implementation note: charge and learning transactions use native effects. Hit recognition, reaction percentages, brief combat penalties and expiry are AI-guided; these diagrams describe the current design, not verified live combat arithmetic.
